

Nature's Plows

By Katie & Emma

Melissa's class has been exploring "Nature's Plows", otherwise known as worms. "It is part of our soil unit." Every two students have a bag with two worms each. "We are doing this to see how the soil changes." Ethan said.

We asked the class what their favorite part was. "We got to pick our worms." Lily said. They also got to feed their worms. The kids got to pick and name their worms too. We asked if anyone had any jobs and Darren said, "No, they don't." The only person that really has a job is Melissa. She checks on the worms over breaks. Anindita said, "Nobody really has a job."

While we were visiting Melissa's class they taught us about worms. We learned that:

The worms are kept in a dark box. If they are exposed to light they will dry up and die. Melissa's class did this for 6 weeks and stopped on Friday, January 22nd 2010. The box is kept in the back of the room.

Melissa's class had tons of fun!!! We hope you learned a little about worms. Thank you to Melissa and her class for the information.
