

Kennedy's Senate Seat Race Is Swinging Into Action

By Kimberly

Scott Brown has already won but do you know everything about the race? Two great political leaders, Scott Brown and Martha Coakley campaigned for the Senate seat previously held by Mr. Edward Kennedy in Massachusetts. The voting took place on Jan 19, 2010

The heat was on as they battled it out on the battlefield of politics. Early on in the race, the Boston Globe surveyed the people and found out that Martha Coakley was leading by 14%. Martha Coakley was quoted as saying, "Brown will lead America backwards into the Bush-Cheney administration."

People everywhere have no clue how this turn out will end. Andrew Smith says, "A low turn out will help Brown." Brown boasts that he'll raise the health care GOP. Some people have their doubts is the republicans will be able to pull this one off.

During the race it seemed like Martha Coakley was sure to win in Massachusetts, which typically vote for democratic. However, just a few nights before the polls opened Scott Brown seemed to be pulling ahead. In the end Brown did squeeze out a win with 52% of the vote.
