The Department's Educational Philosophy

Art is essential in education. Students engage in art production, art history, art criticism and discussion of aesthetics to broaden their understanding of self and community, to place the arts in an historical and cultural context, and to experience the arts as a universal form of human expression and communication.

Guiding Principles

The art curriculum does the following:

- Emphasizes development of students' skills and understanding of creating and responding.
- Teaches the language inherent in the four disciplines: art production, art history, art criticism, aesthetics.
- Enables students to apply both imagination and rational thinking to the making of art.
- Enables students to invent and explore multiple solutions to a problem.
- Enables students to understand the value of reflection and critical judgment in creative work.
- Promotes knowledge and understanding of the historical and cultural context of the arts – how world cultures have been influenced and shaped by the arts.
- Facilitates positive peer interaction, including receiving and using feedback.
- Encourages self-motivation to create and problem solve.
- Uses artistic literacy as a natural enhancement to learning in other content areas.
- Fosters positive attitudes toward art and opinions of other artists.
- Uses a variety of assessment methods to evaluate what students know and are able to do.
- Introduces career possibilities.

HISTORY OF MODERN ART

Course Frequency: Semester course, five times per week

Credits Offered: 2.5

Prerequisites: None

Background to the Curriculum

The History of Modern Art curriculum was written with a research and development grant during the summer of 2008. The course was created in response to the high interest in 20th- and 21st-century art amongst students of Art History.

Core Topics / Questions / Concepts/ Skills

Students will explore, in depth, the various modernist art movements of the 20th and 21st centuries through art making, films, a field trip and discussions. In addition, students will be introduced to broader topics associated with 20th- and 21st-century art, including forgery, money, politics, social protest, and the public perception of modern artists. Students will also be encouraged to seek connections between the visual arts and modern music, film, literature and dance.

This course stresses art making as a valid form of art history. The concept of working in the style of artists as a way to investigate art history is based on the book Our Beautiful, Dry, Distant Texts, which is a critique of traditional art history.

Assessment

Students will be expected to complete a work of art and a written piece in response to our analysis of each art movement. Each challenge is designed to assess student understanding of the concepts and theories involved in the various movements studied. In addition, the assignments will encourage personal response (based on an appreciation/understanding of the artist/style) to specific works of art.
