Earlier today, an email came out from the PTSO regarding the assembly on the last day of school which inadvertently contains a few pieces of incorrect information. Below is the correct information.

On the last day of school, all 7th and 8th graders go to the High School auditorium for an assembly where we recognize many students for a variety of awards (i.e. National Spanish and French Exams, Johns Hopkins Awards, etc.). If your child is going to be recognized, you will be invited to the assembly.

The Certificates of Completion for 8th grade students will be distributed on teams either Thursday or Friday morning. Dismissal is from the HS at 10:45 on that last day (Friday, June 18)

Another piece of new information which I want to share with you is an announcement that will be read to all student on Tuesday morning in homeroom.

To the students of RJG,

At yesterday's staff meeting, I met with your teachers and reviewed the school's policy for appropriate student attire. I clarified that while shorts and T-shirts are acceptable, clothing which exposes midriffs, as well as visible underwear will not be allowed.

If your clothing violates this policy, you will be asked to go to your locker and put on other clothing. If you are unwilling to follow this request or do not have any additional clothing, you will be sent to the office where we will either loan you a piece of clothing or call your parents/guardians to bring a change of clothing to school.

As I said in the original Grey Matters this morning, all parental support is greatly appreciated.
